Forecast For Scotland
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Tuesday 25 May 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Rather cloudy start. Sunny periods developing with scattered showers.

Today:
Rather cloudy at first with still some patches of light rain. Then brightening up this morning with sunny spells developing along with showers. The showers will be well scattered so still a lot of dry weather. Cool northerly winds.

Tonight:
Dry with clear periods at first then becoming cloudy, particularly over north and east Scotland. There will be patchy rain coming along, much of it near the east coast.

Wednesday:
Cloudy start in the east with patchy light rain, gradually dying out. Then sunny spells developing across much of Scotland with a few afternoon showers. Becoming warmer with lighter winds.

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Turning much warmer than of late with a lot of dry weather and some sunshine. However there will be cloudy, damp conditions at times on Friday and Saturday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.